

Invitation for Submissions for the Fritz-Wörwag Research Prize 2009

In order to support research and science the medium-sized family company Wörwag Pharma from Böblingen in Germany is to award the Fritz-Wörwag Research Prize for the seventh time this year. The award this year will be presented for works - including completed dissertations/theses - which make a significant scientific contribution and contain new experimental or clinical findings on the theme of „Pathogenetically based treatment options of diabetic complications - especially with thiamine and thiamine derivatives“

Well-researched synoptic papers which have been published from 2005 on or which are currently being printed may also be submitted.

The fact that a work has already been published does not preclude an application for its submission being made, insofar as its publication lies not more than one year in the past. However, the work must not have been awarded a prize elsewhere. Particularly important results can also be submitted as partial results contained in a brief version before the completion of the entire work.

Submitters undertake to provide information concerning whether - and if applicable where - the work has been accepted for publication or been published.

The size of the work should not exceed 40 typewritten pages (including tables, graphs, bibliography) and should be preceded by a brief summary of the objectives and results of the work. The submitter is responsible himself/herself for any authorisation that is required (e.g. from the institute director). A submission form is available on the homepage.

The prize is € 10,000 and will be awarded on the basis of the decision reached by an independent jury as stipulated by the rules. The judges' decision is final. Legal claims are excluded.

Please submit the manuscript (in German or English) together with a brief curriculum vitae/résumé and a brief version of the objective of the work to the following address by 30.09.2009:
